Kim A. Page has helped thousands of professionals get their message through in multinational and local organizations. A passionate communication expert with an embodied approach, she brings a substantial toolbox with body language, influencing skills such as active listening and unforgettable presentations and she is a vocal coach and a choir leader.

Kim has taught creative writing at educational institutions, in-company trainings and in Denmark's biggest state prison. With a solid sense of audience awareness and textual knowledge, she has developed a method to help professionals reach their customers by crafting their bio with a fresh approach.

Her career stretches across three continents, and she has worked with leaders and executives from Emirates Palace, the European Commission, NASA, Greenpeace, Volkswagen, Abbott, and other major organizations. She is a highly rated and engaging keynote speaker and an authority on interpersonal communication.

Page received a bachelor's degree in dramaturgy from Lund University and a master's degree in organization development from Sonoma State University. She has served as a faculty member or guest lecturer at a number of universities, including Carnegie Mellon University, Copenhagen Business School, Universitat de Barcelona, and the Haas School of Business at UC Berkeley.

Kim is fluent in six languages and she recently published her first book, The Right Kind of Loud, with a collection of her communication methods. You can download a free chapter of her book here -

Main objectives of the session:

- Get the RIGHT KIND OF LOUD for your writing voice.
- Learn to tap into your right brain to ACCESS THE STORIES you carry inside.
- Enhance your WRITING SELF-ESTEEM.
- Walk away with a BIO outline for your website, LinkedIn profile or other contexts.

These are some of the voices from last time:

"A great, authentic workshop, full of useful methods to try, yet tapping into our innate wisdom. I think the insights could start me on a whole new journey I never knew I wanted!"

"Kim, without fail, brings an element of robust communication styles to the table. She is an absolute sell-out at every one of her sessions. Thank you DBWC."
